This new book focuses on the cross-national environment that international firms face. It shows how this environment affects individual behavior, organizational behavior, and human resource management. Clearly written and concise, the book sensitizes readers to the many differences that managers face when they operate cross-nationally, and gives them tools to understand and deal with these differences.

"Betty Jane Punnett provides readers with comprehensive coverage of the topics and issues critical to managing effectively in the 21st Century. Her book is a useful text for all who want to learn how to succeed in the global economy." --Rosalie L. Tung, Ming Stella Wong Professor of International Business, Simon Fraser University
"Professor Punnett's text successfully accomplishes the difficult task of providing a competent, captivating overview of international OB and HRM while de-centering these topics from the narrow interests of businesses and governments in the dominant research-producing nations of the world. The material draws from the author's extensive personal engagement with international aspects of OB and HRM as well as her experiences in the Caribbean and a broad range of culturally and economically diverse groups of nations." --Mark Peterson, Florida Atlantic University
"Should be required for students in management, business, and human relations. It incorporates scholarly research with practical methods in a style that is accessible to the interested student as well as the experienced professional. ... Though designed as a comprehensive text, this volume is a fascinating read--blending scholarship and story into a challenging treatise. Highly recommended. Upper-division undergraduate and graduate students; professionals." --Choice
