I read it wondering if it would be empowering to my wife as an entrepreneur, and in addition to that ended up getting really powerful guidance for myself. The guide offers compelling analysis on how in the new Global Financial World, women really have a chance to come into their own financially, as the new imperative is the entrepreneurial, high-communication, interpersonal skills and trust capital that women already have as strengths. This is becoming a huge advantage for women that can be tapped and guided with mentoring, and the book offers tons of that. It's aimed at women, but truly we all need to tap into those "feminine" abilities as our world evolves to one that emphasizes meaning and spiritual growth in business, global networks and self-direction. We all will succeed when we, as the author describes, understand that money is like a sixth sense that can be developed and integrated into our lives. The advice is solid, and all of it is well-explained, with direct help in getting readers to hone in on their purpose, goals and desires, and how to manifest success with a Millionaires' Mindset and multiple streams of income, all grounded in meaning and resilience. The specific tips on investing (stocks and property) are mind-blowing, and the author shares advances info about contemporary marketing. There's a lot to think about and act on. As a bonus, the book links to companion worksheets and supplemental resources that make the tips even more concrete and immediately actionable. Definitely an empowerment-based approach to taking control of financial development and breaking down glass ceilings in the way of success, all in a well-written and easy-to-understand book and system.

By Michelle Mendez

I could completely relate to the author from the very beginning of this book which kept my interest all through the book. Having a special needs child and being the sole breadwinner of the house myself, I had to learn a lot the hard way about money and business. The Mother Lode Manifesto is a valued treasure in my book collection and should be for any woman who wants to take control of her own destiny and not depend on anyone else for support. The author does a wonderful job at teaching us how to be empowered and independent. I wish I had this book several years ago when the economy started to sink, it would have taught me what I needed to do to survive and stay financially strong during that time. Her advice on doing a budget based upon what you forecast you would spend if you were living your preferred lifestyle was one thing that I immediately put in place as I take my business to the next level. It was a wonderful feeling to envision myself living the life I deserve as I created my budget. This book left me feeling energized, powerful and even more ambitious to grow my business and set financial goals. Even if you don't have a business yet, you can gain valuable advice on what kind of business you should start even if you don't know yourself. Having read many books related to Women in Business, this is the best I have read in a very long time! It is the perfect investment in yourself.

By Anna

The Mother Lode Manifesto by Margie Baldock, is for any woman that has ever failed or has tried to keep her sanity while balancing work, children and life! As someone that has finished MBA from a top school, it is rare that a business book inspires and teaches you more effectively and more succinctly than major school systems around the world! Margie teaches social responsibility while gaining financial freedom which leads to better lives. She not only rejects the notion that women should be "dolls" and act as secondary class citizens both at home and at the workplace but rejects the new normal of being super woman which includes working hard at both domestic and work environments. She presents an outline, that was informed by her own experience, on how any woman on earth can become a millionaire. It focuses on positive energy and embraces failures all while doing good on this earth. Most people fail to provide wealth for themselves due to poor planning and Margie will show you easy examples of how to become a millionaire. Instead of shepherding women up the corporate ladder, it's refreshing to read a book that inspires women to work together to create something new, something they can call their own.

The Mother Lode Manifesto is a revolutionary call to action for women everywhere to create personal, financial independence through social entrepreneurship, whilst transforming the world at the same time. The author is Margie Baldock, an entrepreneur, property developer, and financial commentator.
