Grant writing book.By Anne W.Good book, recommended by teacher in grant writing classes. Good guide, and great small size to carry around.

Millions of people dream about making money as a freelance grant writer. But grant writing is different than any other type of writing; it requires specific elements as well as a certain style and know-how. By the nature of this series, this book is a clear, concise, and easy-to-follow guide. Covering the basic skills every grant writer needs, they will learn how to get the funds they are asking for, no matter how stringent the submission guidelines. This book explains all a prospective grant writer needs to know, including how to:

- Find the money up for grabs
- Apply for government and foundation grants
- Build community collaborations and partnerships
- Write a statement of need
- Develop a budget and budget narrative
- Fill out appropriate paperwork

This book gives writers the insider information they need to confront the competitive market and seal the deal.

About the Author Judy Tremore is a veteran reporter, editor, and business writer. A native of the Chicago area, she has lived in Michigan for more than thirty years. Nancy Burke Smith has been a freelance writer specializing in grant proposals and other writing for nonprofit organizations since 1987. To date, Smith has garnered and estimated $20 million in grant funds on behalf of her clients. She served for one year as interim program director at the Frey Foundation, where she reviewed grants and made recommendations for funding to the board of trustees.
